PEÑÍSCOLA

The Western Schism

Between the 14th and 15th centuries, the Western Schism marked the history of the Church with the simultaneous presence of two popes. One of them was Pedro Martínez de Luna, better known as Pope Luna. He replaced Clement VII as pope of Avignon as Benedict XIII, while another pope was installed in Rome with the obedience of the English, Germans and Italians. Disavowed, Pope Luna went into self-exile in Peñíscola, where he entered on 21 July 1411, establishing the papal see there and converting his castle into a palace and papal library for himself and his successor. His resignation from office ended the Western Schism.
